

Builder/Architect

Special Feature
Awesome Landscape Design, Inc.

Marvel Construction Co.
Andrew Marvel, President
Quality Residential Construction

Builder: Marvel Construction Co. Architect:
Maryann Thompson Architects.

PHOTOGRAPHY: PETER VANDERWARKER

thrilled, as many of them are repeat clients working with Andy two or three times. Marvel concludes, "The core of our success is establishing and maintaining relationships with our clients. With those referrals in place, we have never had to advertise." Call it "word of mouth" or call it "buzz," Marvel Construction is one of the premier renovation firms to work with in the Boston area.

For more information, call Andy Marvel at (617) 965-7551.

Builder/Architect Magazine is proud to feature Marvel Construction this month. Your commitment to renovating and taking on projects with historic challenges has not only earned you being involved with rewards from the National Trust for Historic Preservation as the Grand Prize winner in its annual Great American Home awards, you have also earned the highest respect from the architects, subcontractors, suppliers and homeowners. Congratulations! ■

PHOTO BY CHUCK CHOI

Boston adaptive reuse project. This 11,000-square-foot masonry school building was converted into a single-family home. It has a two-story living room space with steel and wood balconies which flow from inside to out, soaring above the backyard. Simple finishes of plaster and wood create a perfect backdrop for the owners' own artwork. There is a complete woodworking shop in the basement, art room and sauna as well as a mini basketball court on the third floor. Despite its large scale, it has a very warm feel within. Builder: Marvel Construction Co. Architect: Maryann Thompson Architects.

PHOTO BY CHUCK CHOI